How to Create Environments Where All Employees can be Their Full, Authentic Selves

Panelist

Erika Chesley
Senior Associate Director of Auxiliary Services Initiatives and HR Events and President of USC Staff Assembly

Panelist

Shafiqua Ahmadi, J.D.
Associate Professor of Clinical Education at the Rossier School of Education and the Co-Director for the Center for Education, Identity, and Social Justice

Panelist

Stacy Roberts Giwa, J.D.
Vice President of Ethics and Compliance, Chief Compliance Officer
Led by skilled facilitators, the Connections Discussion Sessions allow participants to engage in a safe, confidential space with other staff and faculty to:

- Come together in solidarity around participants’ lived experiences at the intersections of race, equity, and wellbeing
- Actively connect the content of the panel discussions with their own experiences and sense of culture at USC
- Work together to turn ideas into action in their departments and communities
- Explore available resources at USC to support an anti-racist community

Importantly, the discussion groups are not:

- Recorded in any way
- A place where BIPOC and other marginalized folks are expected to relive trauma for the educational benefit of others
- A substitute for therapy or counseling
- A formal investigatory body
- Webinar attendance is NOT required for the discussion groups

Center for Work and Family Life

CWFL staff remain available to help with mental health concerns during the coronavirus pandemic. Highly-trained clinicians can help you with well-being, stress, anxiety, and other issues. Phone lines are open and remote sessions can be scheduled by Zoom or teleconference for any staff, faculty, their families, and retirees. This is a free service for USC employees.

Call us 24/7 at 213-821-0800 to find out more about counseling and other services.

Office of Campus Wellbeing and Education

CWE focuses on the environment, culture, and systems so all members of the USC community can thrive. Our clinical and organizational psychologists consult privately with individuals, campus groups, departments and schools on issues ranging from building trust, healing from transgressions, and preventing burnout to improving engagement, communicating effectively, and adapting to change. We listen, learn with you, and provide research-backed recommendations and evaluations of new ways to work together more collaboratively, purposefully and productively.
